

From rugged rocks the sailors gain a prize,
 And shipwreck'd oft, from death to life arise:
 So may we at the last dread trumpets sound,
 By true repentance here on earth be found,
 Acceptable in heaven, where joys abound;
 In grateful hymns hail in the new spring-day,
 And, like the angels, never cease to pray:
 A kingdom Quarll doth undisturb'd enjoy;
 He's rais'd a monarch, from an abject boy,
 And here I can't omit the pencil'd plan,
 Of Beaufidelle his monkey and his man.
 The docile beast most servilely obeys,
 And justly merits more than human praise;
 A beauty of his kind, good-natur'd too,
 A brute so pleasing, wonderful and new,
 Subservient to his Lord, loving and just:
 Where's human servant we can thus intrust?
